

Letter: Response to 'A Walker in the City'

To The Editor:

This is in response to Mary Luongo's wonderful reminiscence, "A Walker in the City: Yesterday and Tomorrow," in the September 6, 2020 edition of the Easton Courier. Having lived in both New York City (60+ years) and Easton (42 of those same years), her account struck all the right notes.

But I write to confirm that the city, indeed, "will open to become its lively old, new self [yet] again, there for the walkers to enjoy. And rediscover"

Lois Bloom

Williamsburg, VA (since 2012)

Easton, CT (1968-2012)